Group Rules Agreement

Communication

- Use one main communication channel: WhatsApp for project discussions, sharing files, etc.
- If you cannot complete a task or meet a deadline, inform the team in advance rather than afterwards. This gives the team time to adjust the planning and take action without serious consequences
- Important decisions and agreements must be documented in the WhatsApp group to ensure everyone understands their responsibilities and tasks

Meetings

- Have a fixed daily time at 9:15 for a short stand-up meeting where each team member shares what they have done, what they plan to do next and whether they are facing any difficulties
- Every meeting must end with clear action points, specifying who is responsible for each task and when it should be completed
- If a team member cannot attend a meeting, they should share their progress and plans in the group chat so the rest of the team stays informed

Meeting facilitator

- We chose Ivailo as the facilitator for our meetings. He will be responsible for coordinating and guiding the meetings.
- The facilitator starts and ends meetings on time, makes sure everyone gets a chance to speak and keeps the discussion focused on the topic.

Attendance

- Everyone attends the planned meetings and the agreed project hours at school, on time.
- If you're going to be absent or late, let the group know before the meeting starts
- If you're absent, you catch up yourself by reading the meeting notes and posting your progress in the group chat.

Work and deadlines

- Tasks are divided openly and tracked in a shared board in Trello
- Nobody hands in without someone else checking it first
- Everyone keeps track of their own contribution, which also helps when you show what you did in your portfolio
- Internal deadline is a few days before the real deadline, so there's time to review

Collaboration and respect

- Everyone's ideas are heard before deciding, when someone disagrees, we should discuss it and decide by majority if needed
- Feedback is about the work, not the person and is given directly to the person

Files and tools

- Code goes in Git with clear commit messages; no pushing straight to main
- AI use is agreed on as a group and mentioned in documents

When rules are broken

- First time: a friendly reminder in the group
- Second time: write a written description of what the group had discussed about the problem
- If it keeps happening: involve the teacher or coach

Agreement

By signing below, all group members agree to follow these rules during the project. We review the rules together at the end of each block and update them if something does not work.
